

You'll come out of Reach Cambridge summer school with new knowledge, a group of lifelong international friends, better English and so much more. Yet one aspect of studying abroad for a few weeks is often overlooked. We're talking about the forever useful lifelong skills that you'll develop in a new environment.

Skill No. 2: Mastering the stairs

Most of the colleges in Cambridge are built for accommodation in "staircases" which do, as the name suggests, involve stairs to get into your rooms.

So even if you won't have anyone to compete against like Mr Bean does (there are no lifts), you'll have the opportunity to try out this British sport which allows the island nation to house many people on a small area in tall, stair-centered, houses!
