

Hi all! This is the third post in a series on why, when deciding where to go for a summer school, Cambridge in the UK should be at the very top of your list. We'll talk about the history, location as well as the unmissable activities that will make your experience truly special and that you can't get anywhere else but this lovely English market town.

Reason 3: Punting

There is something almost mesmerising about the way punting fits into the overall Cambridge atmosphere. The river flows around the city centre, enclosing its history, and you will actually feel like you're in Venice when the little punts come round (those are the Venice-like boats).

They move quite slowly and controlling one very well is definitely harder than it looks. Yet it's just one of the things that you shouldn't miss when visiting Cambridge.

When will you get another opportunity to feel like you're in two places at once (Venice and Cambridge)?
